

To whom it may concern,

I am the Television Production and Honors Business Instructor at Leto High School. I have an extensive vocational history prior to becoming an educator, including a decade of owning a financial planning practice overseeing over 200 high-net-worth clients with assets under management of over $150-million and nearly a decade of owning a content creation company.

I have both put together numerous client entertainment events and seen countless motivational speakers both through vocational training and voluntarily to sharpen my own skills as a business professional, so I have a vast frame of reference when it comes to performances like Mr. Griffith's.

The energy that Mr. Griffith brings to the room and the engagement I saw from my students stands among the strongest performances I've seen. He has a charisma that is infectious and evokes consistent reactions from the crowd, driving home much of the deeper and more introspective content while also allowing breathing room for the participants as he mixes in light-hearted moments while successfully encouraging group participation turning the event from a passive experience to an active one.

After the event, many of the students were speaking very highly of their experience and how Mr. Griffith prompted thought into their own success, actions, and motivation. For high school students to have been that engaged and for the core message of Mr. Griffith's presentation to have been successfully administered, I could not recommend him more highly.

Best,
